The rarest and most sought after bill of the Bank of Canada is the $25 denomination. The first issue of the Bank of Canada bills was in 1935 and this coincided with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ascension of King George V, so the $25 bill was issued in commemoration of this event. In the centre cameos are portraits of their Majesties King George and Queen Mary.

Canada issued only one denomination of fractional currency, the 25¢ bills of 1870, 1900 and 1923. These are usually referred to as "shin plasters". This phrase is attributed to the use of low value bills by soldiers of the Revolutionary War period as a lining to prevent their shoes chafing.

More than 5 million of these notes were in circulation in 1929 but since then the number has steadily declined.

The first issue of a Canadian 5¢ silver piece was by the Province of Canada in 1858. A sufficient quantity amounting to 1,500,000 was issued to meet all requirements until after Confederation. In 1870 the same type of 5¢ piece was used for the first issue of the Dominion of Canada, and 5¢ silver pieces continued to be issued until a change was made to a 5¢ nickel in 1922.

Collectors of Canadian 10¢ pieces find the 1889 to be one of the more difficult to find and even scarcer than the mint report of 600,000 would indicate a contributing factor to the rarity is the fact that the date side of Victoria 10¢ pieces wore out more readily than those of other denominations.

The Canadian coins of 1911 are popular with collectors because the obverse inscription differs from all other years. For some unknown reason the words "Dei Gratia" which means "By the Grace of God" were omitted, and these coins are known as the graceless or Godless coins.

Canadian 25¢ fractional currency commonly called shinplasters were issued dated 1870, 1900 and 1923. More than 5 million of these small bills were in circulation in 1929 but since then the number has steadily declined. In 1935 the Bank of Canada ordered that they be recalled from circulation so they are now seldom seen. The expression shinplaster is attributed to the use of similar bills by soldiers of the Revolutionary War period as a lining to prevent their shoes schafing.

Two issues of Canadian coins bearing the date in 1947 were released. The first was the regular issue in 1947. The second issue had a tiny maple leaf added after the date and these coins were issued early in 1948. The reason for the 1947 Maple Leaf issue was that the dies were not ready for the 1948 coinage so the 1947 dies were again used and the tiny maple leaf was added to distinguish them from the regular 1947 issue.

Collectors of Canadian coins often find apparent inconsistencies in the Mint Report figures. One of these is for the 1875 10¢ piece. Although it was reported that 1 million were issued, it is evident from the small number of these coins in the hands of collectors and dealers that a much smaller quantity was actually issued.
